Gallup-Williams

The Methodist Parsonage at Angelica, New York, was the scene of a joyfully but informal wedding on Christmas afternoon at four o'clock when Miss Elaine Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Sturm of Olean, became the bride of H. Delbert L. Gallup, son of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert L. Gallup, also of Olean. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Carlisle P. Smith before a fireplace decorated with Christmas greens and red tapers. The couple was attended by Mrs. Carlisle Smith of Angelica and Ebenezer Williams of Little Valley, brother of the bride.

The bride chose a street length gown of green crepe with black accessories. Her corsage was of orchids. Mrs. Smith wore a black street length dress with matching accessories and a shoulder corsage of gardenias and pink roses.

Immediately following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served for the bridal party. The bride's table was decorated in keeping with the Christmas season and was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake.

The couple left for a brief wedding trip and on their return will reside for the present at 106 South 13th Street, Olean, New York. Mrs. Gallup's going-away suit was of navy blue.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Gallup are graduates of Olean High School. Mr. Gallup recently received his honorable discharge from the Army of the United States after thirty-nine months of service.

As another year comes to a close and a New Year dawns we pause for a moment to look backward as well as forward. We are happy in the thought that we have made so many new friends in 1945 and retained so many old ones.

Looking forward to 1946, we pledge anew our determination to give you the best in value and service possible.

Dear Mr. Stillwell,

Just a few lines in California asking you if you have been sending me the Advocate? I haven't been getting it very much lately. I sure would appreciate the paper. There is lots of news in it and I thought maybe you didn't have my address.

Well, I suppose all of you folks up there are running around in your sheepskin coats. I don't think I'll ever get mad at how cold it gets when I come home. It's just boiling hot over here. I've seen it go up to 138 and that isn't cool. I sure get sick of looking at sand over here. There isn't a tree on the Island. It sure isn't like the good old USA.

Well, I suppose there are quite a few of the boys coming home now. I guess I'm going to get home about June or July. Ooh, that old town will sure look good.

Water is the worse thing ever they. We're rationed to five gallons a day and it used to be three. That isn't very much water to wash clothes with and everything else.

Well, I hope this letter reaches

Cotrelative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures", by Mary Baker Eddy include: "Our Master said, 'But the Comforter shall teach you all things.' When the Science of Christianity appears, it will lead you into all truth. Science is an emanation of divine Mind, and is alone able to interpret God aright. It has a spiritual, and not a material origin. It is a divine utterance,—the Comforter which leadeth into all truth.— In the words of St. John: 'He shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever.' This Comforter I understand to be Divine Science" (pp. 271, 127, 55).

When I have passed the last, far hill-blue turning
Of life's long trail against the sunset burning,

If some can say: "I saw his camp-fire's flame
Gleam through the dark as up the trail I came,
Foot-weary, and discouraged,—and found rest.

He never thought to ask me for my name,
But filled the coffee-pot, and swiftly spread
Fresh balsam branches for my bed.
We talked until the low moon notched the west.

He said not much. But somehow when he spoke Within my weary heart new courage woke.

Forgotten was the aching muscle strain
Of plodding feet and lagging paddle-stroke.

The sullen Future turned a comrade-face,
The grim world seemed a kindly camping place
The trail end grew a gladder thing

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lt. Andy Blake and his wife, Arab, discovered a spy ring headed by a Mr. Jones. Followed to Andy's house by Jones' gang, Arab was taken prisoner, Andy escaped. Andy reported to the army, then was picked up by two of Jones' men and taken to the Jersey coast. In crossing to a small island, the boat was upset by Andy, who swam ashore. He found Paula and set her free. Jones made him a prisoner, Jones, realizing they must escape, then made plans to signal the Nazi submarine to send a rubber boat for them. Jones had a black light, that could signal the submarine and still not be seen from shore, but he wanted to radio Germany.

She slipped past my chair like a pale shadow, found the book, went to the tripod. Joey got her a flashlight. She masked the light with her hand, studied the international code, and began sending slowly, going back to the page for each new letter.

In front of the fat man the big radio set was warming up now. It purred like a giant cat. The fat man touched dials, clamped a receiver over his ears. His fingers tested the sending key. "Joey," he called.

"The code book. Lower right-hand drawer." He flipped keys at Joey, and added, "Get the book, and paper and pencil. This cannot go in the clear. Encode it." He waited while Joey got the code book and writing materials, and then said, "The first sentence: Jones to Ullrich. Second sentence: For Himmler only. CHAPTER XVIII

I sneered, "The commander sees you coming out in the rubber boat and yells 'tricked!' They are Americans in our boat! Ten rounds rapid fire! Blam-blam-blam-blam—"

"Stop it!" "That's just one way," I drawled. "There are a million ways he can take care of you."

He swung back to the set. His fingers jerked on the sending button.

"Chief!" Joey cried. "Don't get rattled! Don't let this guy upset you. Take it easy."

The blind glasses glared at Joey. The fat man's voice sounded as if he were yelling through a blanket. "Quiet!" he shouted. "Who do you work for? For me or Canaris? I begin to wonder. I have just ordered the commander to send in a boat now. We will get aboard before telling him anything. I will take over his radio. I have the authority."

He whirled back to the eyepiece, crouched at it. A message must be coming back. His fingers clutched and twisted at the legs of the tripod. At last he straightened, and gasped, "Schwein! He signals: 'Detectors picked up propeller beat quarter hour ago. Inshore patrol active. Unsafe send boat. Transmit information first.'" He bent to the sending button again.

Joey quavered, "Whatcha doing now, Chief?"

"There!" the fat man said. "I intended him to stand by. Now we see who gets the credit." He bent to the short-wave transmitter, his fingers on the switches.

"Chief!" Joey cried. "It ain't safe! They can pick up that radio"

"The code book. Lower right-hand drawer." He flipped keys at Joey, and added, "Get the book, and paper and pencil. This cannot go in the clear. Encode it." He waited while Joey got the code book and writing materials, and then said, "The first sentence: Jones to Ullrich. Second sentence: For Himmler only. Third sentence: Huge task forces sailed last three days from East Coast Ports of Embarkation. Fourth sentence: Objective absolutely confirmed French North Africa. Encode that. And quickly. There will be more."

"O. K., Chief." Heat lightning flickered on the horizon to the northeast. My skin tingled. Heat lightning at thirty minutes to November? I sucked in my breath. It might have been four miles away. I would know in ten to ing motionless. Renee was more and more and ing out to sea. Moonlight gilded her face. For the first time she seemed to be calm, almost happy. The brief glow washed the horizon again. "On the way," Renee said softly. I took a deep breath and turned to Arab. In the dim room her hair seemed to glow like phosphorus. Her head was tilted, chin up. For a moment she and Renee could have been sisters. They faced the ocean almost eagerly, like lovely delicate figureheads on the old China clip-pers.

"Hold your hat," I said. She smiled. "I'd rather hold your hand."

"I wish I could think of something deathless to say."

"I love you, Andy."

"And I love you."

"That's nice enough," she said contentedly.

She was still smiling at me when everything let go at the seams. The blast was too close, too stunning to be heard. Something pumped the air out of my lungs, picked me up chair and all, and slammed me back against the wall.

I lay there for a short time, dopey with concussion. My chest heaved, trying to force air to my lungs. At first I could only get a sip of air. I worked at it, got a little more . . . more . . . and then a big shuddering breath that put me back in circulation. The chair was kindling wood. I doubled my feet up to my bound hands and worked on the ankle knot. Either I was dead or it was achingly quiet. A gasp seeped in through shattered windows and torn wall. Dust drifted in spray; the dust of a generation, shaken from every cranny by the explosion.

"Andy. Andy."

"There!" the fat man said. "I intended him to stand by. Now we see who gets the credit." He switched to the short-wave transmitter, and flipped the switches.

"Chief!" Joey cried. "It ain't safe! They can pick up that radio stuff."

The fat man cursed at the stubbornly cold radio set. "A chance in a hundred," he muttered. "One destroyer cannot police the short-wave bands. It would take a dozen—what is wrong with this pig of a radio!" He peered over the panel, fumbled among tubes and wires and condensers. Then he walked very quietly to me. "The tube," he said.

I had to play this carefully. I could wreck everything by being suspiciously helpful. "What tube?" "The tube you took from this set. You have not broken it because there is no glass. You did not have the window raised to throw it out. You have hidden it."

"I don't know what you're talking about."

"The tube," he said. His right hand clamped across my face, his thumb dug into the hollow under my right ear. He pressed, and said, "The tube."

"I don't know!" I yelled. "I don't know!" Rockets whizzed and burst in my head. Pain shrieked down every nerve in my body. I could feel it at the tips of my fingers, my toes. I had to take it a second longer. A second longer. It had to look good. It—"In the wastebasket!" I screamed.

"You been askin' for it," he mumbled. "You been askin'." "Good old Joey," I said loudly. "This is the kind of shooting you like, isn't it? This was the kind you had in Spain. Are you still putting out that yarn about the Heinkels you shot down? Or are you telling the real story now?"

Arab was crying. "Andy," she said, "Andy, did it hurt awfully?"

I wet my lips. "It's O. K. now."

"Will . . . will it help them very much having the tube?"

"It doesn't matter," I said. "He'd get his news out either this way or the other. I just wanted to make things unpleasant for him if I could."

Tubes and dials glowed on the set, reflected greasily on the fat man's face. "Yes," he said. "We will settle for that later, Renee!"

She whispered, "Yes?"

"Our friends out there may be worrying. I should have sent more than stand by. Signal them that I am getting the information in order and that it will take a number of minutes."

"I do not know how to signal them."

The fat man leaned over me, snarling something. I didn't care what. I rocked deliriously in the chair and howled up at him. "Watch this one, Jonesy. Get to the window and watch it. Open your mouth and they'll drop one in. Yeeeahoo! Right one zero. Eight eight hundred. Fire!"

He jerked around like a puppet on strings. Lightning glared again on the horizon. Black-powder lightning in Navy five-inchers. "On the way!" I shrieked. "Count it, you rats! Twelve seconds to live! One . . . two . . ."

I went on counting and raving half-forgotten artillery commands while the room turned into a madhouse. The fat man was rescuing his black-light set. He screamed orders. Orders to collect papers. To run to the powerhouse. I heard him howl at Joey to shoot us before leaving but I didn't give a hang. "Eight," I yelled. "Nine . . ." The fat man tumbled out through the door. He wrenched the Luger out of his pocket. I kicked his elbow a split-second too late. He got off one shot before the automatic spun from his hand. Renee quivered. The rifle she held wavered. Then the barrel came up again, steadied. The shots cracked slowly. Six of them. A click. Joey twitched once on the floor and was still.

Arab cried, "She's hurt, Andy!"

I stumbled toward Renee. She leaned on the desk, jamming a small stained fist into her side. She smiled wistfully and said, "There's a knife on the desk. You'll have to help me open it."

I turned so that she could reach my bound hands without moving. The penknife touched my fingers. I held it while she pried open a blade. Then she took it and sawed through the ropes at my wrists.

the wall. I tried to take breath, my legs would move fast across. There was a splash of blood across his face. His jaw hung slackly. He tagged at something in his mouth. "You been asleep?" "You been asleep?" "Good old Joey," he said loudly. "This is the kind of shooting you like, isn't it? This was the kind you had in Spain. Are you still putting out that yarn about the Hankins you shot down? Or are you telling the real story now?" "You shut up!" "Sure you fought in Spain, if you call it fighting. Heinkel's rifles and machine guns against me down in your Heinkel. Your Heinkel, Joey." "You Hei!" he yelled. "I fought on the Loyalist side!" "I saw Renee tumbling in the battered cabinet which had not the man's arsenal," I said. "The State Department claims you were with the Germans, fighting for Franco. Tell us about it, Joey. Tell us about the Condor Legion. Tell us how you shot Bob Fielding."

Somewhere in the room sounded the telltale dry clack of a rifle being cocked. Joey whirled toward the sound, screaming. "Renee, he can't pin that on me! There were lots of us in the Condor Legion. It could be anybody. Renee, take it easy! Take—"

He wrenched the Laser out of his pocket. I kicked his elbow a split-second too late. He got off one shot before the automatic spun from his hand. Renee quivered. The rifle she held wavered. Then the barrel came up again, steadied. The shots cracked slowly. Six of them. A click. Joey twitched once on the floor and was still.

Arab cried, "She's hurt, Andy!" I stumbled toward Renee. She leaned on the desk, jamming a small stained fat into her side. She smiled wistfully and said, "There's a knife on the desk. You'll have to help me open it."

I turned so that she could reach my bound hands without moving. The penknife touched my fingers. I held it while she pried open a blade. Then she took it and sawed through the ropes at my wrists.

Ever Try Making Cough Syrup in Your Kitchen?

Quick Relief, No Cooking, Easy!
If you've never tried mixing your own cough medicine, you've missed a lot. It's no trouble—needs no cooking—and gives you about four times as much cough syrup for your money. You'll say it beats anything you ever tried for coughs due to colds. And here's how it's done:—
Make a plain syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until it is dissolved. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.
Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from your druggist. Put this into a pint bottle and fill up with your syrup. This makes a pint—a family supply. Tastes fine and never spoils. Children love it. And as for results, you've never seen anything better. It goes right to work on the cough, loosening the phlegm, soothing the irritation, and helping clear the air passages. You will like it for its results, and not merely for the money it saves.
Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial irritations. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.—Adv.

that?"

"That's an ideal!" Molly's dimples appeared. Once she'd made a cake for Don and put his initials on it in chocolate frosting. Printed letters must have a magic charm. That night Don had proposed. Humming a tune, she spread the smooth chocolate. Don would have to admit now that she was a good army wife. Wasn't cooking the way to a man's heart, and hadn't Napoleon mentioned a soldier's stomach? She stopped in sudden realization. What were the colonel's initials?

Molly sighed. "I'll have to find out." She hurried into the library, the silver! She carefully copied the letters, Q.M.C. The cake was beautiful. One look and the colonel could be impressed.

She'd been right. Molly watched the colonel stand still and stare. So did the guests. There was an odd expression on the visiting general's face. Still, thought Molly, probably the general's never smiled. Then she started. Mrs. Major Arnold was talking to Mrs. Captain Fox. "I wonder what the general thinks of Colonel Jones' having the initials quartermaster corps on his cake. Unusual, to say the least, when Colonel Jones is in the field artillery."

Another mistake! Molly turned. She'd failed. She'd hurt, not helped, on. She'd never be a good army wife.

Don stopped her. "Molly, what do you mean?"

"I'm sorry—they were on the silver."

"The colonel," Don laughed, hasn't got his things here, so he borrowed from the quartermaster. Darling, it was a wonderful idea. The general was quite flattered. He used to be in the quartermaster corps. In fact, everybody is happy. Come in, Molly. Wish the colonel a happy New Year. And it will be, thanks to you."

SECRET 'MICRO' SYSTEM GETS PEACETIME SHOWING

A heretofore secret microwave relay system for two-way voice transmission, extensively used for military purposes during the war, was demonstrated recently by the Bell Telephone Laboratories over circuits between a room in New York City and Neshanic, N. J. The system had already proved itself sensationally during the crossing of the Rhine by U. S. troops and in the subsequent break-through.

The system which uses what engineers call "pulse position modulation" is said to be the first used for long distance telephony. The radio links used for the demonstration were so arranged as to make a distance of 1,400 miles between the terminals.

The demonstration was for the purpose of showing how the system and equipment may be applied to public use.

PEACETIME OPPORTUNITY

"The understanding cooperation of the American people helped us immeasurably in performing our wartime telephone task," said Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, in a recent statement, and added:

"With the war over, we have the happy opportunity first to move ahead on the job of giving telephone service to all who have been waiting for it and beyond that to speed the nation by means of new long distance circuits."

The Bell System plans to add 2,100,000 miles of long distance telephone circuits during 1946. That is more than were put in during the five years before the war.

SALARIES: Report Highest

In earning $908,070, movie magnate Louis B. Mayer enjoyed the top income in the U. S. for the calendar year 1943 or fiscal year ending in 1944, the treasury reported. Far behind Mayer, Charles E. Wilson, president of General Motors, drew $459,041 to rank No. 2, with Thomas J. Watson, president of the International Business Machines corporation, No. 3 with $425,548.

Fred MacMurray's $411,166 topped movie star salaries, with other peak Hollywood incomes including Deanna Durbin, $326,491; Barbara Stanwyck, $323,333; Bing Crosby, $294,444, and William Powell, $292,500.

General Motors officials were among the highest paid of the nation's executives, other G.M. big-brackets including Ormer E. Hunt, $359,519; Albert Bradley, $350,432; John Thomas Smith, $308,310; Donaldson Brown, $306,160, and Charles F. Kettering, $306,117.

COMMUNITY SHARE OF DEBT COVES HEAVY DRAIN

NO ONE OF US can visualize our individual, family or community net in the enormous totals of the national indebtedness, the annual interest charge, government spending or the number of government civilian employees. As totals, the figures are meaningless and we pay no attention to them.

Highland Park, Mich., a 51,000-population suburb of Detroit, is a place of unusual per capita wealth. A resident of that place has figured Highland Park's portion of these federal government totals, and what they mean to the people of that community. As reported by the Citizen's National committee at Washington, the results are:

"The total of Highland Park's share of the federal debt is 69 per cent of the total assessed valuation of all of the property of the community; the federal government has incurred debts for Highland Park's citizens which are 8 1/2 times the legal limit which Michigan state laws would permit them to borrow

LABOR: Congress Reacts

Inflamed by labor unrest regarding reconversion, congress moved for passage of an "anti-violence" act providing a maximum penalty of 20 years imprisonment for forcible interference or threats against interstate commerce. Labeled as an anti-racketeering measure, the bill grew out of protest against the AFL International Teamster union's collection of funds from independent truckers entering large cities where the ITU is strongly organized.

While congress vented its wrath against the strike wave with the "anti-violence" act, it cooled to move more slowly on President Truman's recommendation for anti-strike legislation calling for creation of fact-finding boards empowered to look into both company and union claims to determine merits of wage disputes.

Hotly opposed by labor leaders, the President's proposal has been halfheartedly received by industry, with both parties continuing to favor the least possible restraint upon their full bargaining advantages in adjusting their differences.

UAW Backs Down

Meanwhile, negotiations proceeded apace in the automobile industry, where the powerful CIO-United Automobile Workers sought maintenance of high wartime wages.

A break in the UAW's demands for a 30 per cent pay

HOME BUILDING:
 Seek Speed-Up

Moving to ease the nation's stringent housing shortage, President Truman mapped a broad over-all program calling for the channelling of building materials into lower cost construction, imposition of price control on new and old dwellings, and emergency use of wartime government shelters for home-seekers.

The President took action as Reconversion Director Snyder declared that a million families already are doubling up in existing homes and the number may continue to grow as service discharges mount. With several years of peak construction necessary to relieve the situation, the industry will do well if it puts up 500,000 dwellings next year, Snyder added.

In exercising its emergency power to route building materials into lower cost housing to accommodate average pocketbooks, the government will favor homes under $10,000, with preference given to vets. Essential industrial and commercial construction also will be granted priority under the plan.

With housing expected to remain short for several years despite increasing production, the President's proposal for legislation for ceilings on new and old structures aimed at keeping prices within reasonable bounds to head off an inflationary spiral.

In providing emergency facilities, including army and navy barracks

NUERNBERG TRIBUNAL: Faces Test

First great undertaking of its kind to provide a precedent for the punishment of war-makers, the Allied tribunal trying top Nazis in Nuernberg, Germany, will receive its stiffest test if defendant press their efforts to get prominent personages in the U. S. and Britain to testify as witnesses.

Under regulations drawn up by the U. S., Britain, Russia and France, the tribunal is empowered to subpoena witnesses in other countries, in which case the latter could then appeal to their own national courts against being forced to appear. Upon the verdict of these judicial bodies, then, the authority of the tribunal would be legally defined.

Under the tribunal's charter, the defendants themselves cannot challenge its validity, their early protests having been denied and their proposals for a mixed court of allied, neutral and German judges rejected. As the case proceeded, U. S. prosecutors outlined the conscription of hundreds of thousands of foreign workers for slave labor in Germany.

Foreign Chiefs Meet

Simultaneous with Sec. of State James P. Byrnes' departure for the meeting of foreign ministers in Moscow, the U. S. state department released its plans for the economic reorganization of Germany, limiting the Reich's industry to necessities at the outset and pegging its living standard to the European average.

Pressing European and Asiatic diplomatic problems as well as the control of atomic energy were high ...federal government totals, and what they mean to the people of that community. As reported by the Citizens' National committee at Washington, the results are:

"The total of Highland Park's share of the federal debt is 69 per cent of the total assessed valuation of all of the property of the community; the federal government has incurred debts for Highland Park's citizens which are 8 1/2 times the legal limit which Michigan state laws would permit them to borrow for themselves, and 32 times what they have actually borrowed; it's enough money to run the community's public schools for 49 years; it's per capita share of all federal em-ployment is 1,591, though Highland Park, as a corporation, employs only 1,250, including police and school teachers and every other city employee; its share of just the interest on the federal debt would run its schools for half a year; its share of a 20 billion dollar federal budget would wipe out its entire school bonded debt of just under 2 million dollars in one year."

Those are appalling figures for the people of Highland Park, Mich. The same kind of figures showing the portion of that federal indebtedness and federal spending the people of your community must pay would be equally appalling to them. The basis is simple. It is arrived at by simply multiplying the number of people in your community by $1,881, each individual's share of the national debt as of September 1, 1945. On the same date the total of civilian employees of the federal government was just about 3,600,000.

We did not, or would not, protest against the war expenditures, extravagant though they were. The cost of the war was not too large a price to pay for freedom. But we can protest against a continuance of government deficit spending; a continuing increase in the federal debt, and the continuing employ-

While congress vented its wrath against the strike wave with the "anti-violence" act, it cooled to move more slowly on President Truman's recommendation for anti-strike legislation calling for creation of fact-finding boards empowered to look into both company and union books to determine merits of wage disputes.

Hotly opposed by labor leaders, the President's proposal has been halfheartedly received by industry with both parties continuing to favor the least possible restraint upon their full bargaining advantages in adjusting their differences.

UAW Backs Down

Meanwhile, negotiations proceeded apace in the automobile industry, where the powerful CIO-United Automobile Workers sought maintenance of high wartime wages.

A break in the UAW's demands for a 30 per cent pay boost came in its dealing with Ford, with the union announcing a willingness to compromise on its position if the company proposed an annual wage and other concessions like pensions, retirement compensation and vacations.

In an effort to meet Ford in the negotiations, the UAW also drew up an unprecedented security clause against wildcat strikes, agreeing on the imposition of a $3 a day fine against workers found guilty of an unauthorized walkout for a first offense, and $5 a day for a second.

While the UAW-Ford discussions progressed, the union's parley with General Motors lagged a step behind, with President Truman seeking to actively intervene in the dispute with the appointment of a fact-finding board to help speed settlement of the wage issue. Unlike the machinery that Mr. Truman would have set up in his anti-strike legislation, however, the G.M. fact-finding board lacks power to force either party to turn over its books.

Production Off

Crippled by strikes, parts shortages and labor scarcities, automobile production has fallen far below previous expectations, with only about 60,000 cars having been manufactured up to mid-December out-ready are doubling up in existing homes and the number may continue to grow as service discharges mount. With several years of peak construction necessary to relieve the situation, the industry will do well if it puts up 500,000 dwellings next year, Snyder added.

In exercising the anti-strike act or to locate buildings and lower cost housing to accommodate the average population, the government will favor homes under $20,000, with preference given to vital essential industrial and commercial construction also will be granted priority under the plan.

With housing expected to remain short for several years despite increasing production, the President's proposal for legislation for ceilings on new and old structures aimed at keeping prices within reasonable bounds to head off an inflationary spiral.

In providing emergency facilities, including army and navy barracks and dormitories, for temporary shelter in crowded areas, the government will move the structures wherever necessary. At the same time, surplus government building materials also will be disposed of, with 70 per cent earmarked for low cost housing.

To speed the program, President Truman named former Mayor Wilson Wyatt of Louisville, Ky., housing expediter to work under Snyder.

PEARL HARBOR:

Testimony Clashes

Divergence of testimony over the war department's receipt of the fateful "winds message" disclosing Japan's decision to wage war against the U. S. on December 3, 1941, marked the congressional inquiry into the Pearl Harbor disaster.

Whereas a top secret report of the army's Pearl Harbor inquiry board stated that the navy had intercepted and decoded the message four days before the surprise attack and then transmitted it to the White House and war and state departments, affidavits later obtained through a special investigation asserted that the army had never received the information. Copies of the message have disappeared having been denied and such proposals for a mixed court of allied, neutral and German judges rejected. As the case proceeded, U. S. prosecutors outlined the conscription of hundreds of thousands of foreign workers for slave labor in Germany.

U. S. CHIEF WAGES

Simultaneous with wage of State James P. Byrnes' departure for the meeting of foreign ministers in Moscow, the U. S. state department released its plans for the economic reorganization of Germany, limiting the Reich's industry to necessities at the outset and pegging its living standard to the European average.

Immediate cause of concern lay in the troubled Iranian situation, where Russia has resisted proposals for a withdrawal of its troops from the north in the midst of a Red-backed autonomy movement in Azerbaijan province, aiding the extension of communist influence in the oil-rich middle east.

In advancing its plan for the economic revamping of Germany, the U. S. said food shipments to the Reich will be necessary during the reorganization period of two years. After that, the Reich should be able to supply its minimum needs and also produce enough to export goods to balance import requirements.

Undertaken by the war department after the army board had filed its report, the special investigation was conducted by Lt. Col. Henry C. HOME BUILDING:
Seek Speed-Up

Moving to ease the nation's stringent housing shortage, President Truman mapped a broad over-all program calling for the channelling of building materials into lower cost construction, imposition of price control on new and old dwellings, and emergency use of wartime government shelters for home-seekers.

The President took action as Reconstruction Director Snyder declared that a million families already are doubling up in existing homes and the number may continue to grow as service discharges mount. With several years of peak construction necessary to relieve the situation, the industry will do well if it puts up 500,000 dwellings next year, Snyder added.

In exercising its emergency power to route building materials into lower cost housing to accommodate average pocketbooks, the government will favor homes under $10,000, with preference given to vets. Essential industrial and commercial construction also will be granted priority under the plan.

With housing expected to remain short for several years despite increasing production, the President's proposal for legislation for ceilings wage besides Wilson in the top brackets including Ormrod, $359,519; Albert Bradley, $350,432; John Thomas Smith, $306,310; Donaldson Brown, $306,160, and Charles F. Kettering, $306,117.

First great undertaking of its kind to provide a precedent for the punishment of war-makers, the Allied tribunal trying top Nazis in Nuernberg, Germany, will receive its stiffest test if defendants press their efforts to get prominent personages in the U. S. and Britain to testify as witnesses.

Under regulations drawn up by the U. S., Britain, Russia and France, the tribunal is empowered to subpoena witnesses in other countries, in which case the latter could then appeal to their own national courts against being forced to appear. Upon the verdict of these judicial bodies, then, the authority of the tribunal would be legally defined.

Under the tribunal's charter, the defendants themselves cannot challenge its validity, their early protests having been denied and their proposals for a mixed court of allied, neutral and German judges rejected. As the case proceeded, U. S. prosecutors outlined the requisition of hundreds of thousands of foreign workers for slave labor in Germany.

SECURE LABOR CAUSE

THE WAVE OF STRIKES is up- setting the economic apple cart of the nation at a critical time. Direct- ly or indirectly every community is affected. Regardless of what merits their demands may have the strikers are injuring themselves with their own weapon. It might go so far the government would large- ly nationalize industry. For those who are seeking to make America over into a socialistic state that it would be a desired end. For labor labor union just as it did in Ger- many and Italy, and as it has in Russia. It may result only in a loss of prestige for the unions; the demand on the part of the public for, and the enactment of, drastic regulatory legislation. It will, un- doubtedly, result in a decrease in union membership, and a loss of sympathy for labor organization. The public, generally, feels the de- mands were too drastic, and the public will resent any interference with reconversion, and the supply of peacetime commodities we must have if we are to escape disastrous inflation. In the end public opinion will decide, unless we should have a runaway congress that nationalizes industry. In either case the unions stand to lose, injured by their own weapon, the strike, called at an in- opportune time.

4-H Girls Win Scholarships Through Skill With Needle

College Education Assured For a Dozen Lucky Ladies

Using needle and thread, ingenuity and perseverance, 12 girls from as many states each won $200 scholarships at the National 4-H clothing achievement contest held at Chicago in connection with the 24th National 4-H club congress. The scholarships were awarded by the Spool Cotton company of New York.

The winners were Dixie Lee Nuttall, Dragoon, Cochise Co., Ariz.; Mae Cagle, Canton, Cherokee Co., Ga.; Meta Marie Keller, Streator,

Visitors from Foreign Lands Come to Learn at 4-H Congress

Other nations are learning from the 4-H clubs of America, it was revealed at the 24th annual 4-H club congress held in Chicago. As their guests the 4-H members of the United States had 66 boys and girls of other nations who had come to share the event.

Eighteen young Chinese, who were sent to the United States by their government to study 4-H clubs and agricultural methods, are among foreign friends who will take home a report of their experiences.

These young Chinese passed November on American farms. As a climax of their American visit they attended the congress with delegates of their "adopted" states. Typical of them is Shih-Che-Shen, who will describe the congress to Chinese youth on shortwave broadcasts soon. Planned Compost Pile

The experienced and practical farmer and gardener knows that leaves of shade and forest trees are a most abundant source of organic material, which he can use to grow better crops.

As soon as they are gathered they should be placed in piles, then packed down and watered. They are left in the piles to absorb moisture.

In late winter or early spring, the compost heap is built, scattering some lime and some high nitrogen complete fertilizer, such as 5-10-5 or 5-10-10, into the pile as it is built up. By late summer the leaves should be reasonably well rotted. The heap is then opened and the material put to use.

In late winter or early spring, the compost heap is built, scattering some lime and some high nitrogen complete fertilizer, such as 5-10-5 or 5-10-10, into the pile as it is built up. By late summer the leaves should be reasonably well rotted. The heap is then opened and the material put to use.

These young Chinese passed November on American farms. As a climax of their American visit they attended the congress with delegates of their "adopted" states. Typical of them is Shih-Che-Shen, who will describe the congress to Chinese youth on shortwave broadcasts soon. He is learning to drive a tractor and operate other farm machinery on the Owen Perry farm, Malcolm, Neb. Mrs. Perry is teaching him English—and he's looking forward to Christmas—the American kind.

South Americans Here.

The "good neighbors" who attended included 7 Venezuelans, 1 Costa Rican, 1 Peruvian, 35 Canadians from Ontario and 4 from Quebec. To get acquainted they visited with different delegations. For instance, one Canadian boy had breakfast one day with Oklahomans, lunch with the Oregon delegation and dinner with Georgians.

Mario Perry of Venezuela has been living with his pal, Gilbert Haddock of Connecticut. He is active in the 5-H clubs of Venezuela, similar to 4-H clubs.

Rita Lefebvre, 20, of Chandler, Quebec, and Normand Laferriere of Berthier, Quebec, "toured Chicago and marveled at "those buildings and marvels in the skies."

In their French-accented English, the dark-haired, vivacious Miss Lefebvre and her 4-H companion from febrvre said it was the first time they had seen a town of 300 population said it was the first time they had seen buildings over 15 stories high. Neither had visited the United States before their present trip, which was in the nature of an award for their 4-H club work in Canada.

Miss Lefebvre, who is employed in a bank, directed an exhibit of home economics work and forest education last August for the 70 members of her 4-H club. Laferriere, who is taking a special scientific course preparatory to entering college, organized two 4-H clubs and a community center for forest instruction at Berthier.

Both they and their chaperons, Mrs. Gerard La Terreur of Chandler and J. A. Breton of Quebec City, marveled at the vastness of the United States 4-H organization.

The Canadian clubs, which are more social and educational organizations than farm groups, have a membership of 500, they said.

The 39th Christmas Seal

Here's the 39th annual Christmas Seal—symbol of the great strides made in the fight against tuberculosis. The first one used in this country appeared locally at Wilmington, Del. in 1907, and brought a response of $3,000.

Bearing the torch of public education as well as direct aid, the seal has been the "spark plug" in the continued conquest of this serious communicable disease. In the United States, deaths from tuberculosis have been reduced to less than one-fourth the rate of 1907, or from 174 per 100,000 population to about 41. In New York State the rate has been cut from 175 to about 49, and to as low as 33 in the territory outside crowded New York City.

Some half million persons in the nation, including many thousands in this State still suffer from tuberculosis. Wartime has slightly increased the toll. So the fight waged by the National Tuberculosis Association and its 2,500 affiliates in every state, including groups in every county of New York State, continues with renewed vigor. In this State the work of public

As the tide of American manpower sweeps westward from Europe through the Port of New York, nearby Camp Shanks in Rockland County has become one of the busiest debarkation centers in the world. Before the tide turned, nearly one and a quarter million men had been shipped from Camp Shanks to the war front. During that time the men going overseas were denied, for security reasons, the privilege of telephoning.

But victory and homecoming have changed this. Veterans returning by tens of thousands in recent weeks have hurried as fast as possible to telephone centers in the camps to call home.

'Inspiring Leadership'

A New York man, Brigadier General Carroll O. Bickelhaupt, who holds high honors for war service, and was recently released from active military duty, has become secretary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, with offices in New York.

For "exceptional technical ability and inspiring leadership" in the U. S. Army Signal Corps here and abroad, particularly during the European invasion, he received the Legion of Merit.

For "establishing a signal communication system within the communication zone superior to any such system ever before established for a military force" he received the Bronze Star Medal. The French Army awarded him the Croix de Guerre with palms.

General Bickelhaupt was a vice president of the A. T. & T. Co., when 1941 he received military leave of absence. His most recent of many military assignments was that of Director of Communications, U. S. Group Control Council, Germany.

In this State the work of public health education and aid to the tubercular is conducted by more than 2,000 regular and volunteer workers. An important function of these organized groups is to give information, mainly by mail and telephone. The information bureau of one group alone handles about 500 telephone inquiries a month.

Of the $14,500,000 raised by Christmas seals in the nation in 1944, this State contributed $1,600,000, and plans to raise more than $1,700,000 from the 1945 sale of seals placed on many millions of Christmas letters and packages.

Innocent-seeming details can be "boobytraps" for the unwary. Many of us, when descending a ladder, feel quite safe when we reach the bottom rung. A safety bulletin distributed recently among telephone workers contained a warning equally useful for others—in home or office or yard.

"That last step in descending a ladder is a civilian boobytrap," says the bulletin. "You can still trip, slip or fall. Exercise extra caution until both feet are firmly on the floor or ground."

Coining the word "phonogenic," a New York publication—"Office Economist," of Jamestown—uses it to signify the "ideal telephone personality." Just as "photogenic" describes a person who always takes well in a photograph. It describes the phonogenic person as one who speaks in a well-modulated and distinct voice directly into the mouthpiece, sounds cheerful and businesslike, says "Thank you" upon receiving requested information, and "never, never alarms the receiver down."

One of the many strange stories of the war is told by Miss Pauline Kozak, New York telephone operator, whose two brothers served in the Pacific area. Separated four years, they met on Iwo Jima, and one had to give his name before the other recognized him.

From a telephone in New York, Alfred E. Duff, of Universal International Films, Inc., recently addressed a convention in Sydney, Australia—more than 10,600 miles distant. It was the first speech ever broadcast by loud-speaker after transmittal half way around the world by telephone. The speech was transmitted by the Bell System over its wire lines to San Francisco and thence by its radiotelephone channel across the Pacific.

LONG TIME OBJECTIVE OF THE FARM FORESTRY COMMITTEE.

To help farm families obtain a higher income and build their farms for future generations by helping them attain the following objectives for farm forestry:

- A. Well-Managed Woodlots and Sugar Bushes, that are:
 1. Free from weed trees,
 2. Not pastured except for small areas to provide shade for cows,
 3. Productive, a growth of at least one standard cord per acre per year; Sugarbushes with 60 4-bucket trees per acre.
- B. Efficient and economical harvesting of woodlot and sugar bush products.
- C. Efficient marketing of high quality forest products.

LOGS FOR RECONSTRUCTION

During the war the cry was for logs and lumber for military use. Patriotic farmers responded with a thousand or ten thousand feet of logs they had felled themselves. These grains of sand from individuals did much to keep the sawmills producing war supplies. The total supply was great.

Now the shooting is over, servicemen are returning, and we are entering a period of reconstruction. This period will see a great demand for housing, both new and remodeled, on the farm and in the city. It has been estimated that the average

Now the shooting is over, servicemen are returning, and we are entering a period of reconstruction. This period will see a great demand for housing, both new and remodeled, on the farm and in the city. It has been estimated that the average working man's house contains 10,000 board feet of lumber. This, with the need for industrial timber, amounts to a stupendous figure.

This winter, you are urged to produce as many high quality logs as you can. Excellent prices will continue; the need is great. Put the poor quality logs into fuel and the better quality into logs. It may be only a few thousand, but multiplied many times by what other farmers produce it results in a lot of lumber.
