Wellsville Teachers' Conference

The members of the Ampoles Central faculty attended the annual Bi-County teachers conference at Wellsville, October 2, 3.

The conference was held at the High School and at the David A. Wilson Public Library.

A general session was held on Thursday morning at which the main feature was an address by Dr. Harry V. Gilson, Associate Commissioner of Education.

Thursday afternoon the group conferences were held. Two of the local teachers took an active part in the English section. Mrs. Weir acted as chairman and introduced the speaker, Miss Slegga. The topic of her address was "Diagnostic and Remedial Reading in the Secondary School."

Friday was devoted again to general sessions. In the morning there were two addresses in the High School auditorium. The first of these was delivered by Dr. Donald V. Smith, President of Cortland State Teachers' College, and was entitled "Advancement in Theory and Practice."

The second was given by Dr. Lewis Wilson, Deputy Commissioner of Education, State of New York, who spoke on "Implementing Democracy."

In concluding session of the conference was held Friday afternoon when Governor Dewey spoke on "Current Educational Legislation."

Letchworth Park Home Destroyed By Fire

The architecturally, lovely superintendent's home at Letchworth State Park burned to the ground Friday last as result of a blaze believed to have started when an ember fell upon the roof. Occupied by Park Superintendent and Mrs. Harry Walker, the family managed to save a few household belongings. Firemen from nearby Portageville and Castile responded. The dwelling was located above the middle falls near the dragon monument and was constructed on design of a swiss chalet.

DEGREES

Angelica Grange gave the 1st and 2nd degrees to a class of six on Saturday October 11th. Following this there was a short program given, which was in charge of the service and hospitality committees.

CARD PARTY A SUCCESS

The card party given by the Women's Auxiliary of the Hill Warner Post on October 1st, was a great success and they wish to thank the public for the cooperation given them.

Methodist Church Services

Carlyle V. Smith, Minister

Youth Sunday will be observed at the 10 o'clock worship service with a message on "A Message To High Adventure." Youth will take part in the service. The church choir will present a special message in music. This is our second Sunday in Loyalty Month.

The church school with classes for all ages will be conducted at 11 o'clock. Remember this is the year of the Crusade in the church school. Let us keep the attendance climbing.

The United Youth Fellowship plans to meet twice each month for study, worship, recreation and refreshment, and once each month purely for recreation. The next meeting will be in West Almond, Oct. 17th.

The Christian Fellowship Hour meets each Thursday at 7 p. m. for discussion based on our study book, for praise and prayer. Attend and receive a blessing and spiritual help.

Birdsall & No. 1 Methodist Churches

The Sunday school will meet at 10:45 a. m. for study of the lesson.

Youth will take part in the preaching service in the observance of Youth Sunday. There will be a message for youth.

Services will be at the Birdsall Corners Church.

Rod and Gun Club

Many members of the rod and gun club turned out Saturday and Sunday and a lot of work was accomplished on their new clubhouse. Concrete forms are in, sills up, siding going on, roof going on and a large fireplace going up.

We ask for a large turnout next Saturday and Sunday to accomplish more while the good weather is on.

Membership is growing larger everyday. They wish it known that ladies are welcome to join; a large number have joined already. Many are taking advantage of buying life membership tickets which help the members themselves and also the club as they are trying to make it a swell place.

Home Bureau

The Millinery Class of the Home Bureau to be held at the home of Mrs. Burdette Engle will be on Wednesday, October 22nd, at 10:30 a. m. Bring serving equipment and hats to be blocked. There will be a tureen luncheon. Bring sandwiches, tureen and tableware. There will be no meeting on October 15th.

TRANSIT HOME BUREAU

The ladies of Transit formed a home bureau unit last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Raymond Hall. Officers elected were Mrs. Raymond Hall, chairman; Mrs. Hester Leaman, president; Mrs. Raymond Coombs, secretary; Mrs. Delbert Benjamin, treasurer. The hostess served tea and cake.

Brush Along Highway Are Removed

New York State is waging a campaign to eliminate from the borders of the state many trees and shrubs which are hazards to traffic safety. M. Wells, director of the Landscape Bureau, State Department of Public Works, states, "In this campaign we are putting the safety factor above aesthetic values," Wells says. He adds that he intend "sight distance" to permit motorists sufficient vision to permit safety. "a surprising amount of shrubbery will have to be removed."

Slogan of this year's drive is 'ability—not Disability—Counts.'

That sums up the situation. Too often an employer, when interviewing an applicant, looks for what he can't do, rather than what he can do. The VA's rehabilitation program of the war wounded is good proof that the so-called disabled can do a crackerjack job once they're fitted to the job.

The state's only covered bridge over Cayuga Creek at Coopersville will be repaired and repainted soon, Wyoming County Highway Superintendent Felix Ramsey states. Six years ago the bridge, the last of five which were once spanned by creek, was repaired and restituted from state funds Mr. Ramsey stated.

The Coopersville bridge was built in 1862 for horse-drawn vehicles of heavy trucks and tractors. The cause of the heavy traffic, the floor planks wear out and the bridge deteriorates.

Letchworth Park Home Destroyed By Fire

The architecturally, lovely superintendent's home at Letchworth State Park burned to the ground Friday last as result of a blaze believed to have started when an ember fell upon the roof. Occupied by Park Superintendent and Mrs. Harry Walker, the family managed to save a few household belongings. Firemen from nearby Portageville and Castile responded. The dwelling was located above the middle falls near the dragon monument and was constructed on design of a swiss chalet.

General Assembly Gets Under Way

U. N. Delegates Convene At Town Hall of the World

WASHINGTON.—At the opening of the current session of the United Nations general assembly I made the usual rounds greeting friends from far corners of the earth whom these meetings bring together. Two converged upon me and one of them began to discourse on the fact that we three were becoming conference veterans.

He started to say " . . . let's see how many is it, there was the first Quebec, then the second Quebec. . . ." But the other man interrupted him and remarked gently: "Oh, no, it goes further back than that. This is my forty-fourth. Remember there was a League of Nations, too!"

The younger man stopped. Of course, his gray haired colleague was right. "And you still believe," the younger man asked earnestly, "that some day they'll work?"

"Certainly," was the reply. And it was made with such simple sincerity that we "youngsters" felt a little reproved.

The next day I walked to a railway station across the beautiful Flushing Meadows in the twilight, the scent of autumn grass all about us, with one of those prodigies, an "instant translator."

There is no word which properly translates "democracy" in Russian. When using the term the Russians translate "democracy" in Russian. But what a gulf between their meaning and ours. Liberty to the individual is not implied at all in the Russian concept.

Indeed, many people have said there is no real desire for liberty on the part of the modern Russian generation. And yet they constantly describe their country and their satellites as "democracies."

There was a good deal of electioneering before and during the close battle over the election for the presidency of the assembly. At first the American delegation had intended to vote for Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil. He is an old and staunch friend of the United States. But he felt that Brazil had had enough honors at the recent conference in Rio, that he had served one term before and that it would be best not to run. He said he didn't want the job. So our delegates pledged for Fratt of Australia, who was exceedingly anxious to be elected. But the Latin-Americans would have none of Fratt. They demanded Aranha run. The

Conserve Food; Truman; U.N. Adopts Agenda

FOOD PLANS: Conservation It wasn't hard for President Truman to figure out Europe is in desperate need of food from the U. S. but the U. S. will leave itself open for even greater price spiking if it boosts its exports higher. The answer, he told a special conference, is food conservation. It is not a matter of eating any less, he said, but of wasting less. In line with that, he announced the setting up of a citizens food committee to develop a food conservation program in the nation. Chuck Luckman of Cambridge, Mass., president of Lever Brothers, was named.

Regarding Europe, Mr. Truman said the food and fuel situation is too critical to allow three

Absorption or Licking Toxicity Overplayed

When DDT fly sprays first became available for farm buildings and livestock, there was considerable talk about sprayed animals being poisoned from absorption through the skin, or from licking one another, or licking the walls of buildings to which DDT had been applied.

Evidence, however, indicates the danger of toxicity to animals has been overplayed. For instance, in Missouri last summer, a cow drank half a tubful of DDT barn spray

"Dear Summer - This State case seems a hard nut to crack. What do you suggest? Sincerely, E. K."

That, Sumner Welles, former undersecretary of state, told the house committee on un-American activities, was a note he received from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt in 1939 when the then first lady was interested in obtaining an open hearing on the passport application of one Hanns Eisler, Austrian refugee from Hitler.

The note, an almost forgotten memento of the prewar era, was hailed resoundingly in newspapers across the land because Hanns Eisler was while the farmer was tinkering with his sprayer and getting ready to spray his barn. The cow suffered no bad effects.

At West Virginia university last year the dairy department threw caution to the wind and put 22 pounds of 50 per cent DDT powder in 100 gallons of water - then sprayed cows with it. That figures out about 16 per cent for DDT. Most recommendations to date have been under 1 per cent for DDT water sprays on animals. "There were absolutely no harmful results" the head of the dairy department reported. The DDT controlled flies, too. The spray was put on in May, and there were no flies on the cows until the middle of August.

power. And as the beautiful women they use are only rationalization. They express idealistic thoughts, but when it comes to acting to implement them, they do not wish to go that far. They already have satisfied that feeling they know they should have, to do the right thing. Then they do not have to do it. Just as all of us rationalize our own misdeeds."

That gave me a pause. It also gave me some hope for this session for I believe that the powers of the assembly will be strengthened so that they can enforce what the people want. The fine words and idealistic plans will have more force if the permanent committee of the assembly on peace and security, which Secretary of State Marshall proposed, is created. It will be in session all the time. Its voice, unswayed by the absence of the stifling veto, will be heard continuously; not merely when the assembly itself is in session.

Words Contain Great Significance

Words still are making trouble, as they always have. It isn't what we say so much as what people think we mean. For instance, there was a long discussion of the word "impinge" on the second day of the assembly meeting. This was just the English meaning, discussed among English-speaking reporters. Secretary Marshall had said this new permanent committee of the assembly would not "impinge" on the security council. The great argument about the committee has been that it was intended to by-pass the security council itself, and thus duck the veto.

If the English-speaking reporters weren't quite sure how far you go, or don't go, when you "impinge," it's no wonder there was confusion when it was translated into half a dozen other languages.

It was the translation of one word which nearly caused a revolution in Korea and made the work of the American commission there infinitely more difficult. It also has affected the whole course of action by the assembly on Korea. It was the word "trusteeship."

Farm Co-ops Do Huge Trade

If volume of trade is any indication, America's farm cooperatives are establishing themselves ever more firmly as a significant force in the realm of agriculture.

In the 1945-46 marketing year, five million individual farmers participating, did a record six billion dollar business, according to an estimate by the farm credit administration of the department of agriculture.

(The FCA report came at a time when a house small business subcommittee was investigating any possible advantages the co-operatives have over other business because of the fact that they are tax-exempt and private companies are not.) Leading in dollar volume of trade were some 226 grain cooperatives which handled 4.6 billion dollars worth of business during the year covered by the report. Dairy marketing associations previously were the leading organizations in the co-op field.

The record business of all types represents a 46-million-dollar increase above the cooperative volume in the 1944 marketing year; FCA reported. It was emphasized, however, that part of this increase is undoubtedly due to the rise in prices of products farmers sell and of supplies the farmers buy.

Minnesota again led all states in the number of farm cooperatives, 1,953 of them reporting memberships totaling 906,000 farmers. Illinois was second in membership with 495,000, while Wisconsin was second in the number of associations with 1,002, most of them dairy groups.

In dollar volume, the huge California cooperatives led the field with 652 million dollars, while Minnesota was second with 477 million dollars.

Grains, dry beans and rice marketing cooperatives accounted for 2,256 associations, 356,000 members and 1.46 billions in dollar volume to take first place for the year among commodity groupings.

Treatment is still in the experimental stage. The disease probably is spread by insect bites. Many cases coming to the attention of bureau of animal industry investigators have followed mechanical abounding when too little or no attention had been given to disinfecting instruments.

If valves have been buttons removed when young, by means of chemical desludging fluid, the danger of spreading the disease by desludging tanks is eliminated.

In the town of special weeks and observances eventually there should be a list, even in the daily paper, of such events. That is, however, the management of a celebration in which the hole in the donut is the central feature, as you undoubtedly know, comes from the baking industry.

Although the celebration may be a little more than a year old, it is still a very important one. It is a celebration that is as exciting as any game ever played.

When a player gets the ball, he usually pops it into his mouth and lights out for the goal. Opponents are privileged to run him down, or choke the ball out of his mouth or otherwise discourage him. The team first getting 12 goals is winner.

Admirer. The veteran... these are used in whacking opponents near the head to screen the shot.

What the spectators are seeing... Opposing teams search on the field and face each other in two lines...

When a player gets the ball, he usually puts it into his mouth and holds it for the goal.

A game might last 20 minutes... It might last all day. A player attempting to tackle a ball-carrier is liable to pumps backing by his "guard" or anyone, and sometimes 15 scuffling motions going on at once.

On the field are "drivers," elderly men who are armed with long switches. With these they point toward the small and often obscure ball or in the player hiding it, crying "hah! hah!" ("here! here!"). They also are empowered to heat up laggard players, but this privilege seldom is exercised nowadays.

Some surreptitious betting is done as the teams meet in midfield. In former days, the squaws were the heaviest bettors, putting up wagers of beads, blankets, cattle, blankets and even their unborn kids.

Element of Culture. The ball games were important in ancient Cherokee culture. Originally there were six clans, of which there are vestigial remains of four. The

Broasted Lamb Breast. (Serves 4) 2 pounds breast of lamb 1 medium onion 1 egg salt taste 1 teaspoon salt 1/2 teaspoon red pepper 1 egg water

Put lamb into 3 pieces. Season with salt and pepper. Place in a hot skillet with the fatty side of the meat on the bottom so they will brown evenly.

Wash potato and cut into 1/2 inch lengths. Cover with boiling water. Add parsley, thyme, bay leaves, salt, pepper and cayenne. Simmer until tender, about 2 to 3 hours. Let cool in stock. Drain meat, dip in egg and roll in crumbs. Fry in deep fat (375 degrees) until brown.

Ham-Sweet Potato Fritters. (Serves 2) 1 cup ground, cooked ham 2 eggs mashed sweet potato 1 egg, beaten 1/4 cup sifted flour 1 teaspoon baking powder 1/4 teaspoon salt

For cooked carrots, flock them with chopped chives or parsley by adding the latter to the cooked lot you use for seasoning.

Season chopped, freshly cooked spinach with crumbled bacon and a dash of oil. Top with hard-cooked egg white and yolk, separated and put through a sieve. Scalloped or stewed tomatoes take an added color and flavor if you add a dash of herbs to them and also a suggestion of finely minced onion and chopped green pepper.

Here are two real economy dishes which you'll like for the cooler weather. Broasted Ox-tails. (Serves 4) 1 ox-tail 2 cups parsley, chopped 3 sprigs thyme 1 bay leaf Salt and pepper Dash of cayenne 1 egg, beaten

Wash ox-tails and cut into 4-inch lengths. Cover with boiling water. Add parsley, thyme, bay leaves, salt, pepper and cayenne. Simmer until tender, about 2 to 3 hours. Let cool in stock. Drain meat, dip in egg and roll in crumbs. Fry in deep fat (375 degrees) until brown.

Crude Pot Roast. 2 pounds chuck of beef 1/4 cup salted oil 2 cups of 1 bean 2 bay leaves 1 onion, sliced 1 teaspoon thyme 1 teaspoon salt Pepper 1 tablespoon flour 1 tablespoon lard or drippings 2 cups tomatoes

Put the raw carrots by slicing them with a potato peeler and curling them around the finger. Slip off the curls and place them close together in a dish of very icy water. Let stand for one half an hour and the curls will stay.

When you broil ham for dinner, place corn or green beans in the dripping pan and let the vegetables catch the delicious juices.

BIRDSALL

Mrs. Charlotte Birdsall, 1201 North 12th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., is the author of a new book, "The Story of the Birdsall Family," which is now being published by the Philadelphia Book Co.

SCHOOL TAX NOTICE
Having received the school tax bill for the month of October 1937, from the Philadelphia Central School District, I am hereby notified that the same is due and payable by the 15th day of the month of November, 1937.

THE HOME STRETCH

Back in the horse and buggy days we had a two-mile automobile race at the home stretch. It was a real thriller. The way these lightweight drivers pushed their small-fry cars over that half-mile track was something to watch and remember. The best paper reported that some of the speed demons were clocked at over fifty miles per hour and predicted another year hence a "mils-a-minute" race.

Should Growers Keep Lamb for Replacements?

Lamb prices are high now and a smart thing to continue high is to raise your own replacements. It is a good idea to keep your own replacements. It is a good idea to keep your own replacements.

Aprons

The aprons which were loaned to the boys here, all have been turned to their owners but one. It is a small dotted white one with lavender and yellow flowers on it. The identification got lost so they don't know who it belongs to.

Fatholes for Rockets

The old story "Oh, how I hate to get up in the morning" might be changed for humorists to "Oh, how I hate to make holes in the ceiling" when you have the sort of large bed-making and the way the cushions of the bed are made.

THE FICTION CORNER

HARD GUYS BY MILTON BRACKER

THE dead man's foot protruded from the blanket like a discarded boot. A pan of water rested on the sidewalk; they had tried to do something for him, without being able to. Just an ordinary sidewalk, a speeding car, a rat-tat-tat and that was all. Another not-so-big shot was through.

Five minutes after the cops came, a squeaky sedan jolted to a stop at the opposite curb. Half-a-dozen men piled out.

"Reporters," someone in the crowd decided.

The newcomers took in the scene in a matter-of-fact way, then swarmed about the lieutenant and the homicide squad man and piled them with questions. One of the newspapermen was chewing gum. The others were smoking and one rotund fellow laughed raucously at something the homicide squad man said. Soon a few broke away and headed for the drugstore across the street with the blue and white telephone emblem outside. Within twenty minutes all of them squeezed back into the car.

"S'long, Mac, see y'in church," the man at the wheel yelled to the lieutenant as the gears meshed.

"Hard guys," the man in the sparkled, giving a pert look to the whole tangly bundle.

Hennessy stopped pondering. Delany tossed his book aside, and both ambled over. Reide turned his head from the card table.

"The mutt probably has fleas," he remarked. "Keep it offa my desk."

As if understanding, the puppy turned to its critic appealingly. Melsner laughed gruffly, ignoring the complaint.

"It's a cute-lookin' mutt at that, ain't it, kid?" the Old Man winked to Hennessy. "Send out and we'll give it a feed."

One of the ever-present boot-blacks was dispatched across the street. In a minute or two, the pooch was sipping milk and sniffing chopmeat, oblivious to further criticism, or his audience.

Ginger, temporarily deserted, snuffed in and out of the chair, always feeling for Reide, who always petted him. The dog rubbed against Brown's trousers by mistake.

"Why, the ———," the startled clerk swore. He reached down and picked up the pup clumsily, and tossed him carelessly to the floor about a yard away. Animals with guys wouldn't keep animals with here," he growled, drawing a card. "You'd think it was a zoo."

Nobody replied. Hennessy looked up queerly from his typewriter.

Ginger, not having sensed the re-buff, returned to the table. Again he brushed Brown's trousers, and the clerk kicked vigorously. There was a sharp squeal, then Ginger, living up to his name, bit.

Brown roared, grabbed the pooch from his leg, and before anyone could protest, hurled him with crushing force against the wall. There was a crunch, then a whimper.

Every eye in the place turned to the battered little body on the floor. But in a split second, every eye was glued on the centre of the room.

was through.
Five minutes after the cops came, a spunky sedan jolted to a stop at the opposite curb. Half-a-dozen men piled out.
"Reporters," someone in the crowd decided.
The newcomers took in the scene in a matter-of-fact way, then swarmed about the lieutenant and the homicide squad man and piled them with questions. One of the newspapermen was chewing gum. The others were smoking and one returned fellow laughed raucously at something the homicide squad man said. Soon a few broke away and headed for the drugstore across the street with the blue and white telephone emblem outside. Within twenty minutes all of them squeezed back into the car.
"Young Mac, see y'in church," the man at the wheel yelled to the lieutenant as the gears meshed.
"Hard gurs," the man in the crowd muttered, as the machine turned the corner.
"You said it," his companion agreed, dryly.

An hour later, Joe Melsner of the City News Federation, "Old Man" of the borough's police reporters, left the smoky-walled pressroom on the ground floor of the Supreme Court Building to buy an afternoon paper. Johnny Hennessy, of the Globe, the kid of the shack, sat in a corner figuring out his expense account. Jim Reide, of the Post-Flash, Nason, of the Mail, Cohen, of the Reflector and Lenox, of the Home Press, with a few of the usual pressroom hangers-on, were at the inevitable rummy game. Opposite, Delany, of the Star, legs stretched majestically across his desk and feet high in the air, sat back reading a fat book with a scarlet cover and yellow edges. Levito, who was with an up-county paper, fidgeted in a phone booth, waiting to "clean up" the shooting story.

A voice thundered in the corridor. The others looked up; they always did when Melsner spoke. He was pointing to something huddled at the doorway.

Every eye in the place turned to the battered little body on the floor. But in a split second, every eye was glued on the centre of the room.

"Hennessy caught the clerk with a hard left to the jaw."

"We'll call him Ginger," Hennessy suggested. "Lookit the fire in his eyes, will you?" Ginger yapped appreciatively, provocatively. That finished the card game. Reide, the most die-hard of the players, threw down his gummy cards, and with the others, gathered around Melsner's desk. Fondly they watched the grimy little mutt push his snoot into the worm-like chopmeat.

Two days later, Ginger was part of the life of the shack. A bootblack had been commissioned to give him a bath, to provide a lined box for a bed, to continue general caretaking. While the men were out on stories—

Trick Mirrors Produce Extraordinary Reflections

The magic mirrors, which distort images—making short people tall, thin people fat, etc. — and which are found in amusement parks and penny arcades, are complex optical instruments, says Collier's. By the scientific arrangement of numerous curves on their surfaces, they are made to produce hundreds of odd effects.

The most incredible of such mirrors is one which, when two people stand before it, reflects the one normally right side up, while the other person appears to be cut off at the waist, the upper part of his body being replaced by a second pair of legs extending upward.

Remember wartime cigarette shortages? Different brands smoked? Those cigarettes were more palatable than ever!

 up" the shooting story.

A voice thundered in the corridor.
 The others looked up; they always did when Melsner spoke. He was pointing to something huddled at the doorway.

"Now what do you call this?" the Old Man grunted, stooping over.
 He picked up the cringing something and deposited it gingerly on his desk, a massive roll-top affair with "Private: Keep Out!" on it in forbidding letters. The "something" was a very tiny dog, a bedraggled puppy that looked as if it hadn't eaten in as long as it hadn't bathed.

 Its eyes were red-rimmed, as if with weeping. But there was a pink spot on the end of the moist black nose. And the eyes themselves the others, gathered around Melsner's desk. Fondly they watched the

While the men were out on stories—holdups, suicides, fires, whatnot—
 Ginger tripped around impatiently, until they came back. Then he greeted them joyously, with quick, short barking yelps.

The pressroom was crowded one sultry afternoon, crowded with sweaty men in shirtsleeves. At the card table, next to Reide, was Al Brown, a thick-necked hardware clerk who spent his idle hours with what he called the "newshounds."

Jaw.
 Brown reeled, regained his footing, swung, and missed. Nason and Delany started to intervene, but Melsner, who had taken everything in quietly, stopped them with a move of his hand. "Let 'em go a while," he said, grimly. The others backed away.

Thoroughly aroused, Brown lunged at his lighter rival, who danced aside just fast enough. As the clerk plowed by, the reporter grabbed him by the scruff of the neck, swung him around, and sent him sprawling away with another punch that cracked against his jaw.

Brown shook his head, spat, then went for Hennessy again. The result was still another crack; he could feel his eye swell as if air had been pumped around it. Clearly he was no match at boxing for the fire-eyed "newshound" who sidestepped and stung him so deftly.
 He dropped back, then plunged low like a football player and threw Hennessy to the floor.

Again Nason and Delany leaped forward to interfere, but the Old Man, an intense gleam in his eyes, restrained them.

It looked bad for the reporter.

the floor-boards. Then suddenly the top of Hennessy's legs appeared, and the other leg applied pressure from beneath, and a perfect wrecker's "scissors" buried the heavier man to the side, almost reversing the position.

The knotted pair whirled crazily across the floor like a two-headed fend. They crashed into Mohaner's desk, upsetting a bottle of purple ink, which spilled over both of them. Then they tore apart, and each staggered in his seat, a livid mess.

Brown wiped his brow, smearing it grotesquely with sweat, ink, and last time. Hennessy, his whole frame taut for one blow, poised like a matador and as the clerk rushed up like a lead mallet. It caught the chair, and he went down for good. From the corner, a farm hawk signaled Ginger's approval, and their senses.

Ten minutes later, a few blocks down, Brown was telling his boss how he'd been "mobbed" in a card porters.

"I told you to keep away from those fellows," he was told. "They're hard guys."

In the pressroom, Reide held a blue bowl and Delany held Ginger. The others were clustered around, beaming. The puppy's bruised side was bandaged clean around his fat little middle, and tied with a funny bow on top, like a Christmas parcel.

"Will ya look at the runt go for that milk, will ya!" Melmer grinned at Hennessy.

THE FICTION CORNER
HARD GUYS
By Paul Vincent Smith

Hard wasn't even breathing, he knew from the moment he saw the other man's eyes. He had tried to get up, but the other man's hand was on his shoulder, and he knew he had no chance. He had an uneasy, unsteady feeling, a feeling that he was in a bad way. He had a feeling that he was in a bad way. He had a feeling that he was in a bad way. He had a feeling that he was in a bad way. He had a feeling that he was in a bad way.

Horse Winner of Race in Up-Side-Down Position

Probably the only race ever won by a horse while in an upside-down position was run at Dargaville, New Zealand, on February 2, 1911, says Collier's.

Ridden by Joe Paxton, this four-year-old, brownish, grumpy, well-built horse that weighed 1000 lbs. was a really splendid and fast runner. Several times and then glide across the line with the clanging of the bell, it still looked ahead at the horse that came in second.

Beware the Blind Spot!

Oncoming headlights can momentarily blind the best of drivers. It requires some seconds after passing glaring lights for your eyes to dilate again in the darkened road. Even in this brief space of time you may not see the dim figure in the road ahead of you until it is too late.

It's the early hours of darkness, especially in the Fall and Winter when traffic is still heavy, that produce the heaviest fatalities in driver-pedestrian accidents. The three hours after sunset are three times more dangerous than daylight hours.

A safe driver reduces his average speed at night. He looks away from glaring lights, watching the edge of the road on his side. He never "overdrives" his lights and can stop at any time within his headlight range. He is especially careful at intersections and is on the watch for unlighted vehicles, and motorists changing tires at the side of the road.

Pedestrians, for your own safety, walk to the left facing traffic, carry something white. Be extra cautious at night. Never forget, the life you save may be your own.
